Types of Collocations

Collocations encompass a wide range of word combinations, each with its unique characteristics. 'Collocations in Context' categorizes collocations into several types, including:

1. Noun-verb collocations: These combine nouns with verbs, such as "commit a crime" or "pay attention".
2. Adjective-noun collocations: These pair adjectives with nouns, such as "heavy rain" or "strong coffee".
3. Verb-preposition collocations: These combine verbs with prepositions, such as "look after" or "get away with".
4. Adverb-verb collocations: These include adverbs with verbs, such as "quickly eat" or "completely forget".

Usage of Collocations

Using collocations correctly is essential for effective communication. 'Collocations in Context' provides valuable guidance on how to integrate collocations seamlessly into speech and writing.

One key aspect is to pay attention to the context in which collocations are used. Different collocations may be appropriate in different situations. For example, "make a decision" is suitable in a formal context, while "pick something" is more informal.

Additionally, the book emphasizes the importance of using collocations in a natural and balanced way. Overusing collocations can make language sound stilted and unnatural. Instead, learners should strive for a balance between collocations and other types of word combinations.
