King David is one of the most important figures in the Bible. He was a great warrior, a wise ruler, and a gifted musician. He is also the ancestor of Jesus Christ. But what was David's race? The Bible describes him as having "ruddy skin," which has led to much speculation.

Some scholars believe that David was a black Hebrew. They point to the fact that the word "ruddy" can also mean "black" or "dark." They also note that David's father, Jesse, was a shepherd, and that shepherds were often black in ancient Israel.

Other scholars believe that David was of mixed race. They point to the fact that David's mother, Ruth, was a Moabite. The Moabites were a people who lived east of the Dead Sea. They were often described as being dark-skinned.
