Nimrod's Early Life

Nimrod is first mentioned in the Bible in Genesis 10:8-10. According to the biblical account, Nimrod was the son of Cush, the son of Ham, the son of Noah. Nimrod is described as being a "mighty hunter before the Lord." This likely refers to his skill in hunting animals for food and provision.

to his physical strength and courage. Nimrod's qualities would have made him a natural leader in a time of need.

Nimrod's rise to power was not without its challenges. The Bible records that Nimrod was opposed by a group of people known as the "Rephaim." The Rephaim were a race of giants who lived in the land of Canaan. Nimrod eventually defeated the Rephaim and established his kingdom in Babylonia.
