In the tapestry of life, brokenness is not an aberration but an inevitable thread that intertwines with the experiences of countless individuals. It is within the depths of these broken pieces that Neejay Sherman, a survivor of abuse, found her calling – to create a world where victims of trauma find solace and empowerment. Her unwavering determination gave birth to Broken to Peace, a movement that has become a beacon of hope, healing, and transformation.

A Childhood Shattered: The Seeds of Brokenness

Neejay's own journey is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit. As a young girl, she endured unspeakable horrors at the hands of those who were supposed to protect her. The physical and emotional abuse she suffered left deep scars, shattering her innocence and leaving her feeling lost and alone.

In the aftermath of her trauma, Neejay struggled to cope with the psychological wounds inflicted upon her. Fear, shame, and self-doubt consumed her, preventing her from fully embracing life. The broken pieces of her childhood seemed irreparable, threatening to define her forever.

A Light in the Darkness: The Birth of Broken to Peace

However, amidst the darkness, a flicker of hope began to emerge. Through therapy and the unwavering support of loved ones, Neejay slowly started to piece together the fragments of her shattered self. It was during this process of healing that she realized the profound need for a safe and supportive community where victims of trauma could find solace and empowerment.

Fueled by her own experiences, Neejay founded Broken to Peace in 2017. The organization's mission is to provide holistic support to individuals who have experienced trauma, with a focus on empowering them to heal, thrive, and break the cycle of violence.
